My dear Dr. Munz:-

I did not have time to come to see you as I much desired; but I was glad of the glimpse I had and the opportunity of meeting Professor Jones. Now, I have looked up Jones' description of P. tubulatus and have examined Jos. Meiere's plant from Needles. It does not seem to me to agree with P. tubulatus and not does it seem to differ essentially from P. centranthifolius. The leaves are even broader than in some P. centranthifolius and there is no indication of any linear quality. The flowers are not long enough. They are the same as the others that we have. The calyx is the same. I find the length of the internodes to vary and besides the specimen is very young and the pedicels may lengthen as the plant grew older. We have no specimen that I could classify as P. subulatus. You will now have a chance to see the type and can be sure. Let me know when you see the type.

Yours sincerely

Alice Eastwood
